Waldorf Grain-of-the-Day Meal Plan

Steiner's seven planetary grains · one grain woven gently through each day

Sunday · Wheat (Sun)

traditionally seen as a harmonizer of the whole body

Morning Whole-wheat pancakes with warm stewed apple
Midday Fresh-baked bread & butter with lentil–vegetable soup
Evening Whole-wheat pasta tossed with seasonal greens

Monday · Rice (Moon)

traditionally seen as gentle and calming to digestion

Morning Cream-of-rice porridge, cinnamon & almond milk
Midday Rice bowl with steamed vegetables & a soft egg
Evening Coconut rice with raisins, mild vegetable curry

Tuesday · Barley (Mars)

traditionally seen as strengthening (high in silica)

Morning Barley porridge with honey & pear
Midday Hearty barley & root-vegetable soup
Evening Barley pilaf with mushrooms & herbs

Wednesday · Millet (Mercury)

traditionally seen as warming and enlivening

Morning Creamy millet porridge with stewed plums
Midday Cheesy millet mash with steamed kale
Evening Golden millet–vegetable patties

Thursday · Rye (Jupiter)

traditionally seen as nourishing to head & bones

Morning Soaked rye flakes with berries & yogurt
Midday Dense rye bread, butter, cheese & cucumber
Evening Rye-topped vegetable bake; rye crackers with soup

Friday · Oats (Venus)

traditionally seen as building stamina & easing stiffness

Morning Warm oatmeal with apple, raisins, walnuts, maple
Midday Savory oatcakes with vegetable broth
Evening Vegetable gratin with an oat-crumble top

Saturday · Corn (Saturn)

traditionally seen as stimulating to the muscles

Morning Cornmeal porridge (polenta) with maple
Midday Corn muffins with a vegetable chowder Evening Soft polenta with roasted seasonal vegetables

Make it a rhythm

- Let one grain quietly thread through the day — it needn't fill every meal.
- Cook together: children love grinding, stirring, kneading, and shaking butter.
- Open meals with a short blessing & a lit candle; eat slowly, family-style.
- Lean on what's in season locally for the fruits & vegetables around each grain.

Meal ideas are original suggestions inspired by the tradition. The grain "properties" are traditional Waldorf / anthroposophic views, not medical advice. For recipes: The Waldorf Kindergarten Snack Book (Lisa Hildreth) & Festivals, Family and Food (Carey & Large).
